Scholarships to study Master in International Cooperation for Development

Cartagena de Indias, February 6th, 2017.

The Escuela Latinoamericana de Cooperación y Desarrollo (Elacid) of the Universidad de San Buenaventura Cartagena, with the support of the Chiesa Cattolica Italiana (CEI), is accepting applications for scholarships for the 5th Edition of its Master in International Cooperation for Development, which is offered in agreement with the Università degli studi di Pavia (Italy).

The scholarship program that finances the half of the tuition fee to former fellows, looks to support master's studies to graduated students from different fields that are interested in acquiring or straightening their knowledge in International Cooperation for Development, and to implement their skills in the area of the Promotion of Sustainable Human Development in Latin America and the Caribbean.

The Master in International Cooperation for Development aims to consolidate research and training fields about the impact of international cooperation in the regional politic integration process. Its study plan which has four academic cycles, may be pursued in two years in full time classroom courses on Fridays and Saturdays taught in Spanish. It also includes a national or international internship program in more than 60 institutions all over the world. At the end of the course, fellows will hold a Master's degree in International Cooperation for Development.

The Master is also part of the Cooperation and Development Network (CDN) and the Red Ibeoamericana Académica de Cooperación Internacional (Riaci).
